26th Annual International Consortium on Governmental Financial Management (ICGFM) International Conference

PFM in the 21st Century The PFM Architecture, Institutions, And Tools to Meet the Challenges of the Modern Worlds

Sunday, April 29 - Friday, May 4, 2012

Miami, Florida - USA

Learn about the PFM institutions that provide the foundation for meeting the demands for greater accountability, transparency, and better management of public resources

ICGFM is focusing on how PFM has evolved over the last fifteen years to meet greater demands for accountability and transparency, and to manage through unprecedented economic changes and crises. A key element of this evolution is the establishment of structures, mechanisms, and rules that govern management of public resources in a period of rapidly evolving technology, greater demands for better management of public resources, and major economic challenges. Valuable information on how countries are incorporating these elements of modern PFM will be some of the benefits of attending this conference. Representatives from Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America, the Caribbean, and North America will share their practical experiences in adopting these new components of PFM.

Key themes of this conference include:

- Independent Accountability Institutions
- Performance informed resource allocation
- Risk management as an element of PFM
- Reporting standards
- Managing beyond the current budget year

Interested participants are encouraged to register early to take advantage of discounted rates and secure a spot. Visit the ICGFM website for more information as the time approaches, www.icgfm.org.
