

Ladies and Gentlemen. After three days of learning, sharing and networking, it's time to bring our event to a close. The good news is that while we leave this conference behind, the knowledge we have gathered can live on. When we return to our respective countries, we will bring the best practices shared from experts all over the world with us.

In the same way that we promote transparency, accountability and good governance in our daily work, we hold ourselves to these same principles. Everyone in this room embodies these principles. We use them as currency to empower public financial management reforms to better serve our citizens.

These principles form the foundation of public financial management. They help us to inspire trust in the people whose money we manage and whose dreams we help make possible. Without this trust, the entire system falls apart. Which is why transparency, accountability and good governance are so important.

The impact potential of the people and knowledge in this room is enormous. We have more than 100 representatives from 35 countries around the globe. We are all committed to helping drive our countries forward.

It has been a remarkable conference. The passion, vision and expertise of our speakers and panelists has been inspirational. Thank you again to our Program Committee and our Vice President of Programs, David Nummy, for assembling such a strong program.

I would also like to thank all the moderators, the facilitators and, of course, you, the participants for your valuable contributions in the sessions and the workshops.

Remember to stay updated on the latest ICGFM news at www.icgfm.org We encourage you to talk to your colleagues about

ICGFM and share with them what you learned here in Washington this week. We will make all of the presentations and photos from this conference available to you on the ICGFM website.

I'd like to thank our sponsors once again. Our hosts at the Fiscal Affairs

Department of the IMF. Our platinum sponsors: FreeBalance and Grant

Thornton. Our gold sponsor: Oracle. Our silver sponsor: Sita Corp. And our supporting organizations, Graduate School USA and IBI

International.

Before I conclude, I'd just like to once again thank the ICGFM, and all of you, for two amazing years as president. It was truly an honour to lead this great organization and to help promote public financial management as a force for change, innovation and growth in our world.

Though my role at the ICGFM will change, I will always remain a fierce advocate for the work and principles of this organization, and this industry. Thank you again.

In closing, I wish to thank all of you for being part of an incredible Winter Conference. On behalf of the ICGFM I would like to wish everyone a safe journey home. We appreciate your support and very much look forward to seeing you in the future conference.

Thanks again, gracias and merci.
